A Day In Transition

From Oil Dependency to Local Resilience

Saturday 29th May

11.00 – 18.30 | €10 | Cultivate

Hosted by Cultivate and Transition Ireland and Northern Ireland in association with ECO-UNESCO, Re-dress and Near90FM

Transition Towns is an inspirational process, conceived in Ireland in 2005 and now adopted by communities all over the world. The model aids communities in finding new ways of coping with the challenges we face, together. By localising our food production, developing renewable energy sources, enhancing our local economies and future proofing our buildings, communities develop the resilience to weather the storms of these challenging times.

The aim of this day is to bring Transition initiatives from around the island together to share what is working and what is not, to introduce the process to those getting started and to explore ways forward in Ireland. As well as the scheduled workshops, there will be exhibits, ongoing discussions and information sharing throughout the day. If you are in transition, thinking about it or want to know more, come along.

11.00 Community Media – Building our capacity to communicate our message and utilise local and community media.

11.00 Community Resilience – The story of Cloughjordan Ecovillage and the building of sustainable community.

11.00 Creative Recycling – Turning waste into useful products. Workshop for 10 to 18 year olds.

13.00 Community Food – Exploring the benefits of setting up gardens and food systems in the community.

13.00 Community Energy – An introduction to the potential of anaerobic digestion.
